DETAILED ACTION

1. This action is responsive to communication filed 1/2/08.

Response to Amendment

2. The examiner withdraws the 35 USC 101 rejections for claims 26-30 for the claims not defining a computer readable medium.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed 1/2/08 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The examiner maintains the 35 USC 101 rejections for the mere manipulation of data, or an abstract idea or merely solving a mathematical problem without limitation to a practical application in the pending claims. Examiner interprets the editing of a pixel can range from merely changing or manipulating value in a mathematical problem (i.e. multiplying 5 and 6: editing the value of the 5 to a 4). The examiner still sees the claims to be the mere manipulation of data, or an abstract idea or merely solving a mathematical problem without limitation to a practical application. In view of your arguments, claim 51 can be either a product or process (machine or software). Thus, the software of claim 51 is rejected under 35 USC 101.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

4. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1-51 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

The USPTO "Interim Guidelines for Examination of Patent applications for Patent Subject Matter Eligibility" (Official Gazette notice of 22 November 2005), Annex IV, reads a follows:

While abstract ideas, natural phenomena, and laws of nature are not eligible for patenting, method and products employing abstract ideas, natural phenomena, and laws of nature to perform a real-world function may well be. In evaluating whether a claim meets the requirement of section 101, the claim must be considered as a whole to determine whether it is for a particular application of an abstract idea, natural phenomenon, or law of nature, rather than for the abstract idea, natural phenomenon, or law of nature itself.

For claims such excluded subject matter to be eligible, the claim must be for a practical application of the abstract idea, law of nature or natural phenomenon. Diehr, 450 U.S. at 187, 209 USPQ at 8 ("application of a law of nature or mathematical formula to a known structure or process may well be deserving of patent protection."); Benson, 409 U.S. at 71 175 USPQ at 676 (rejecting formula claim because it "has now substantial practical application").

To satisfy section 101 requirements, the claim must be for a practical application of the Sec. 101 judicial exception, which can be identified in various ways:

The claimed invention "transforms" an article or physical object to a different state or thing.

The claimed invention otherwise produces a useful, concrete and tangible result, based on the factors below.

5. Claims 1-51 recite the mere manipulation of data or an abstract idea, or merely solve a mathematical problem without a limitation to a practical application.

A practical application exists if the result, of the claimed invention is "useful, concrete and tangible" (with the emphasis on "result") (Guidelines, section IV.C.2.b). A "useful" result is one that satisfies the utility requirement of section 101, a "concrete" result is one that is "repeatable" or "predictable", and a "tangible" result is one that is "real" or "real-world", as opposed to "abstract" (Guidelines, section IV. C.2.b). Claims 1-51 merely manipulates data without ever producing a useful, concrete and tangible result. Regarding independent claims 1, 26 and 51, the claims merely samples pixels in first region, samples pixels in the second region and edit based on first and second distributions. Claims do not provide any result from the editing. Thus, the claims are merely manipulating data without ever producing a useful, concrete and tangible result. Thus, practical application does not exist in the claims.

In order for the claimed method to produce a "useful, concrete and tangible" result, recitation of one or more of the following elements is suggested:

- The manipulation of data that represents a physical object or activity transformed from outside the computer (MPEP 2106 IVB2 (b) (i)).
- A recitation of a physical transformation outside the method or apparatus, for example in the form of pre or post processing activity (MPEP 2106 IVB2 (b) (i)).
- A direct recitation of a practical application in the technological arts (MPEP 2106 IVB2 (b) (ii)).

Applicant is also advised to provide a written explanation of how and why the claimed invention (either as currently recited or as amended) produces a useful concrete and tangible result. Claims 2-25 and 27-50 depend on claims 1 and 26, respectively.
